

ceived for Student Aid limit the number of the larger reductions that the Student Fee Committee can grant. Nevertheless, during the past few years, fee reductions have totaled from $23,000 to $40,000 annually. There are also available a few tuition scholarships whereby a limited number of students who cannot pay the minimum fee are enabled to attend the College for less.

Each applicant, before his admission can become effective, must submit a satisfactory Financial Agreement signed both by the student and by the person responsible for payment of fees. A new Agreement must be signed in advance every year that the student remains in the College. The College reserves the right to alter the fees from one year to the next in the light of changed circumstances.

No student may enter or remain in residence while any financial arrangements for the current year are pending.

For personal expenses students should have $20 to $30 per quarter exclusive of transportation.

There is no provision for students to work their way through Black Mountain College in the sense of earning their fees while carrying on their usual program of studies. In another sense everyone works part of his way through by participating in the community work. A few students earn an appreciable part and, in rare cases, all of their fees by working in alternate quarters or during the summers. Occasionally opportunities exist at the College, especially for trained secretaries, to follow this plan. However, for all such positions a degree of competence is required which presupposes previous experience. Ordinarily applicants should not count on being able to finance their expenses in this way unless they are themselves able to find adequately paid positions during the quarters that they work. It is sometimes possible to include as a definite, though optional, part of a student's training, practical work experience outside, as well as within, the College community.

For other fees and information concerning payment of fees, see Annual Announcements.

HEALTH

A health certificate and an oculist's certificate are required of all applicants for admission. All entering students are urged to be immunized against smallpox, diphtheria, and typhoid fever. The College reserves the right to insist upon inoculations and all other health measures that its medical consultants may prescribe. An infirmary has been provided in which people suffering from minor
